

Press Release

Congratulations are in order for Ms. Ursula Daly! As a professional Geothermal Therapist Ms. Daly has been accepted as a Charter Member in the prestigious international Stone Walkers Association (SWA). SWA is the first international organization to monitor and certify Geothermal Therapy practitioners. (For information visit www.stonewalkersassociation.com) Geothermal Therapy is the professional term for the most popular form of stress and pain relief in the massage and spa industry today. This massage technique involves the use of both heated and chilled stones, therefore 'geo' for stones and 'thermal' for temperature accurately describes this amazing therapy. Membership in this hallmark association for the world's most skillful Geothermal Therapists is quite an honor. Only individuals who have received in-depth continuing education offered by Board Certified education systems are allowed to join this elite group of professional practitioners. Membership is by invitation only. Stone Walkers World Wide Association is recognizing the talents and dedication of professional practitioners who are willing to practice safe and effective methods of Geothermal Therapy. This method of wellness is based in ancient indigenous cultures from across the globe and has only recently surfaced in the professional massage industry.

At first considered a passing fad Geothermal Therapy has proven effective in pain and stress relief, becoming the '2008 most popular spa treatment' according to trade magazines.

Ms. Daly received her continuing education certification in Geothermal Therapy through LaStone Therapy Inc. from Maura Barry an SWA certified education provider.
